

Washington, DC - Rep. Bruce Braley (D-Iowa) today released the following statement on the passing of Iowa native Dr. Norman Borlaug:

"Norman Borlaug was considered one of the greatest scientists of the 20th century for good reason. By most estimations, his agricultural innovations saved billions of lives and improved the nutrition and health of countless people across the globe.

"I was honored to meet Mr. Borlaug in 2007 when he received the Congressional Gold Medal at the Capitol, and I'm proud that he was a native Iowan. He will be missed, but the legacy of his life's work will live on for generations to come. My thoughts are with the Borlaug family during this difficult time."
